EVENT	MODERN EVENT	Listing	Modern - 1960
--------------	--------------	---------	---------------

Parish church. C13, C15, with complete restoration of 1869. Chancel with north vestry and organ recess, nave with north aisle (2 bays) west tower, and south porch, all in Decorated style. Plain tile roof. Walls of large knapped flints, with stone dressings: quoins, buttresses, plinth, reticulated tracery; the vestry has thin horizontal flint panels and brick quoins, bands, diagonal buttresses. The interior is Victorian Decorated, with a number of interesting features. On the north side of the chancel there are unequal Perpendicular arches with panelled soffits, the eastern most (and smaller) covering an altar tomb of Purbeck marble with male and female effigies (c1510); on the south side is an earlier Perpendicular canopy arch above an altar tomb with an inset (unmarked) brass: the south face of the tomb is outside the church, associated with a restoration ogee-headed priests door and a traceried window. A C19 Perpendicular table top tomb forms an altar at the east end of the aisle. There is a pillar piscina, a C13 chancel arch, a Norman tower arch. In the tower are 2 vertical slabs, one with the eroded figure of a knight (c1200). The altar reredos is 1843, the font and seating 1844. On the chancel floor is a fine brass of a knight in armour (Sir John Lysle, 1407), and at the west end of the aisle an oak carved statue of a lady (Elizabeth Philpotts) in Elizabethan costume (of ruff, puffed sleeves, wide skirts). The tower of 1801 is of ashlar, with 3 plain stages, a crenellated parapet with tiny crocketed pinnacles at each corner; unusually the porch (of Perpendicular style) is attached to the east side of its south wall.

EVENT	TOMB	Built	Medieval - 1506 to 1510

Tomb of Sir Nicholas Lisle died 1506. Comprising a rectangular tomb chest set into a wall recess on the southern side of the church, beneath a panelled arch with castellated cornice. Typically late Gothic in style with carved panels featuring narrow niche-like panels flanking square panels with centrally placed shields now blank.
The tombs current position relative to the panelling of the arch suggests it has been moved from its original setting.

EVENT	HOUSE	Built	Post Medieval - 1600 to 1699
The building survey suggests that the southern part of the house is the earliest and that it was extended to the rear (north). Several areas were exposed in the walls of this part of the house. Although difficult to date, the brickwork is thought to be broadly C17, earlier than the listing suggests.

EVENT	MANOR HOUSE	Built	Post Medieval - 1770 to 1939
See list entry. A number of timbers used in construction of the manor house were previously part of a late medieval timber framed structure. The reused timbers included a principle floor joist (supporting the sitting room floor), a post (reused as a secondary floor joist), a doorpost and a length of wall plate. The floors appear to have been inserted during the early C19 alterations. It is likely that the older timbers were taken from a building that had been dismantled at about this time. It may have been a structure that previously occupied the site or possibly a structure from the moated manorial site to the north.

EVENT HOUSE Listing Post Medieval - 1800 to 1835

cottage. Early C19. Rendered walls and thatched roof. Symmetrical front (south) of 2 storeys, 3 windows, with a west side outshot. Hipped roof, with catslide to part of the rear and brought to a low eaves above the setback outshot. Most of the walling is rendered (on cob) but the east side of the front is flint with brick quoins, cambered arch, and bands (all painted). Casements: one old casement in the east gable. Wood porch with cusped bargeboard to the gable, patterned head to the oval arched doorway, and vertical boarding to the sides.

--------------	------	-------	------------------------------

Two barns. It is likely that the barns were present on this site from the late C18 or early C19 although the current buildings are probably late C19 in date, replacing earlier buildings to meet the changing needs of the farm. Barn 1 (on the north side) is constructed from red bricks laid in Flemish garden wall bond. The timber roof structure has been constructed of machined timber. Barn two is present on the west side of the yard. It is rectangular in plan with a single pitched roof, which is covered in slates on the west slope and asbestos sheeting on the east.
